MANY EASTER GERMANS

SOCIETY CELEBRATES THE ENDING OF HER LONG FAST.

Interesting Festivities in Several Portions of Virginia-Enjoyable Germans at Lexington and Staunton.

LEXINGTON, VA., April 8 .- Special .is hard for the brass-buttoned cadet, and the "calico student" to reconcile themselves to the quiet humdrum of everyday existence without the excitement of a "mess hall hop," the "santion room hop," the "student hop," or the 'cotillon german." Although all of these have priority over a private german, they have all given way this week to the event of the college year, both at the Institute and the University. It is the Kappa Alpha Fraternity German, given by Alpha Chapter, composed of nine young men of the University, in honor of their lady friends of Lexington and Lynch-burg. The "Hill City" sent up eighteen of her fairest and best, chaperoned by Mrs. I. A. Moore, a thing unprecedented, except at commencement, while the se-cret fraternity's friends at home were out in the most bewitching and charm-

There were forty couples besides lookers-on, upon the floor or gathered behind the many screens and portieres arranged about the McCrum habitues of commencements here, was resplendent in the decorations of the fra-ternity's colors, crimson and old gold, and other well-arrayed adornments, all surmounted at the head of the hall by an immense shield figurative of some sentlment of the fraternity. It was a most select occasion, and an invitation, both amongst the young ladies and the men, was highly prized and taken ad-vantage of, and which, regardless of the attractions during the week in that city. attractions during the week in that city, drew such a crowd from Lynchburg, where the "Kappa Alpha" has many

WONDERFUL MACHINES.

A Modern Manufacturing Plant at the Singer Office.

A glance over the office of the Singer lewing Machine Company in this city would be a revelation to the ordinary citizen. It was to me yesterday when I was courteously shown over the large three-story brick establishment at No. 295 east Broad street by Mr. C. G. Lambert, the general manager.

Nearly every lady in Richmond knows of the elerantly furnished and well apsold, but it is on the upper floors where ess and a truly remarkable evidence of he enterprise of the Singer people is iscovered. On the second floor is the office of Mr. Lambert, the general agent, who from this central point directs and and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee. Like the first Anadama and remesser. In a case has floor, everything is elegantly appointed, and the most modern appliances for the dispatch and comfort of business is enjoyed. It was on the third floor, however, where I saw the enterprise which Mr. Lambert with natural pride invited me

Running the entire length of the room was a table occupied at intervals with sewing machines suited to various classes of manufacture; in fact, a model manufactory, similar to the plants being erected for manufactures of all sorts of fabrics throughout the South by the Singer Company. Those familiar with the graceful machines, which ornament nearly every home in the South, would ever think that it was one of a hundred and eighteen styles of machines which this ompany manufacture. This model manufacturing table in the establishment is occupied by a large number of these machines, which with astonishing rapidity sew on buttons, make and work all size button holes, put to-gether shoes, bind books, and do many other things more marvelous. As Mr. Lambert says, their machines are spe-cially adapted to all the various needs of the manufacturing trades, and that there is no description of manufacture possible with a sewing machine that they are not prepared with the best machines in the world to do it with.

In that office the model manufactory is run by an electric motor, but the Singer Company is prepared to furnish sewing machine plants to be run by steam, water power or electricity, and furnishes electric motors of their own nanufacture when needed. Noting the growing tendency in the South to control the manufacture of the thousand and one pany have arranged this splendidly ap-cointed sales-room for the display of manfacturing machines run by electric

New improvements in power fittings, constantly made and new appliances added to the sewing machines. Everything new and of interest to manufacturers will be found in these show-rooms.
Out-of-town merchants would find in this sales-room of manufacturing ma-chines an interesting place to visit. They may here find profitable suggestions for doing cheaply and expeditiously work that is now being slowly and laboriously done by hard. Among other courtesies they will find desk room and writing material. A look at these wonderful appliances naturally brings to mind the question, Why should the South go East for all her clothing and other goods, for which she furnishes the material, and then buy it back in the manufactured article, when they can be manufactured more cheaply here than in the North or East. The Singer Company has shown won-derful enterprise in the introduction of the machines which make such things sible, and the thinking manufacturers of the South should investigate its claims.

The Odd Fellows compose the largest and richest secret society in the world, and carry out any undertaking in which and carry out any undertaking in which they are likely to engage. The order is growing at the rate of 30,000 a year. It expends $3,000,000 a year in relief of the destitute, the education of the orphans, the care of the widows and the burial of the dead. That sounds like a large sum of money, yet it is only half our revenue. Many brethren, says Noah's Times, have the idea that the secretary of a lodge has very little to do except to receive money from members, give them receipts and keep the minutes. If it is usual to send out notices of meetings, and a member falls to receive one, the secretary is blamed, if not actually censured. The members think that because the secretary is paid a small stipend he sured. The members think that because the secretary is paid a small stipend he should be held responsible for everything that goes wrong. Brethren should be more considerate. No member knows the work of a secretary until he has perform-ed the duties for a year or two; then he will find out that the work is not done n the few hours that the lodge is in session, but requires the exercise of both time and labor between the sessions, especially if the lodge has a large member-
